Censorship is not an act of positive perfection, but a mark of moral and intellectual failure in some elements of a society. . . .

Dr. Vernon J. Bourke.

For Catholics, censorship is a noble function. For them control, neither negates nor abridges intellectual freedom. . . .

Rev. Redmond Burke, C.S.V.

How can a person be a good Catholic and a good librarian at one and the same time? . . .

I think the philosophy of reading is this: I read so that I may grow in a sense of human brotherhood . . .

Rev. Harold C. Gardiner, S.J.

Without the power to dream a little and to look beyond the immediate present, how can there be release and freedom for the spirit? . . .

Anne Thaxter Eaton

Intelligence now has a vocation in the world, a vocation focused and made steady in the vocation of the Word to humanity, of which He is form and image . . .

Rev. Daniel Berrigan, S.J.

"Forming Lifetime Reading Habits," the Theme of the 1958 CLA Convention, was interpreted by more than 30 librarians, educators and critics . . .

THE PROCEEDINGS

35th Annual Conference

Chicago, Illinois

1959

Some excerpts from The Proceedings:

The Catholic intellectual stands as the eternal answer to non-Catholic critics who mistakingly believe that all Catholics think and speak alike in every subject from art and architecture to a balanced budget . . .

Rev. John F. McConnell, M.M.

The Bible is an old book, a library of old books. In its pages we hear the voice of God speaking to us through men of an ancient civilization and an alien mentality . . .

Jerome G. Kerwin, Ph.D.

The American Medical school has been ruined by its misplaced worship of science. . . . The bigger the medical school, the bigger the budget, the greater the research, and the worse the school . . .

Herbert Ratner, M.D.
